Stone Age

Year: 2

Term: Summer 1

Doggerland

We live on an island called Great Britain and are surrounded by water. But, hundreds of thousands of years ago, Great Britain was not an island. Doggerland connected Great Britain to Europe

Hunter-gathers

Thousands of years ago, humans had not learnt to grow their own food. So people would gather food they could find or hunt animals and catch fish to eat.

Cave paintings

During the Stone Age, humans painted pictures in caves. They did not write anything down during the Stone Age.

This is Stonehenge and it was built at the end of the Stone Age. This can be found in South England, historians still don't know why this was built.
